Christianity's Next Task

The signing of (1), the Treaty of Versailles in which is incorporated the covenant of the League of Nations; (2), the naval treaties at Washington; and (3), the Kellogg and Locarno peace pacts, have all been hailed by the world as important milestones along the road to permanent world peace and a better understanding among the races of the earth. Special services were held in churches to mark some if not all of these events, while thousands of columns of editorial matter were printed lauding these notable events and to end up to racial animosities. And every word written or spoken in praise and support of these great peace movements were fully deserved.

But, note the Literary Digest, the new programme for world-wide spiritual co-operation adopted by the International Missionary Council at its last meeting in Jerusalem may be considered as revolutionary in the ecclesiastical world as the above named three events are in the political world. Also, note that the Kellogg and Locarno peace pacts have only探入ed deeper into the problems which agitate the world and array nation against nation, race against race, and concludes the Literary Digest, while little publicity has been given to the deliberations and conclusions of the Conference held on the Mount of Olives, no bells ring or paean of praise uttered as yet in most quarters of the world, may rain Jerusalem with General Wishes and Praise in the heaven of manhood toward international amity and the ending of racial hatred.

Among the subjects discussed on the sacred mount outside the Holy City were the race problem; the rights of minorities; the protection of women and children in industry; relations between strong and weak nations; the land question; international and spiritual co-operation; the solution of church-state and various other phases of world peace. Specialists on race, industry and international relations from the minorities section of the League of Nations and the Universities of London, Harvard and Columbia, among other institutions, were present to contribute technical knowledge as these problems were attacked.

Another subject of a following lengthy and searching study of conditions as they now exist in countries all over the world, and the relation and duty of the Christian church thereto, this International Missionary Conference meeting at Jerusalem found that "the Church has not firmly and effectively set its face against race hatred, race envy, race contempt, or against racial, national and social pride, or against the lust for wealth and exploitation of the poor and weak."

It was evident right at the beginning of the Conference that the old attitude of superiority of the West over the East, regarding of Nordic civilization and the Christian religion as one and the same, was not acceptable. The idea of race superiority was not admitted for a moment, and the Conference indicated its belief that the basis of race prejudice is a complete misconception of the meaning of race. The Conference also racial intermarriage for racial, cultural, and religious fellowship was declared to be the natural expression of Christianity, and was welcomed as a step toward world-wide understanding.

Who is then the true dispenser of truth and conqueror are in line with the teaching of the Founder of Christianity?

And does not man from this Conference a special message for the people of Canada, and especially for the people of Western Canada? Of late there have been unfortunate revivals of racial campaigns by certain classes of our people against other classes based solely on questions of race and colour. And we are all too well aware of the fact that many of the leaders in these campaigns, which are a denial of Christ's whole life and teaching, are recognized leaders in the Christian church.

It is the fond hope and deepest ambition of many thousands of forward-looking, patriotic Canadians that this young Dominion reaching out in its new nation will become a leader for good in the world. We are not reaching out to Canada and the world, but to the natural resources of its race, trade and commerce, its cultural attainments, but in those spiritual attainments and contributions to all mankind which in the final analysis, are the true measures by which to estimate the greatness of any people or nation.

Forest Fire Costs

Will Prevent Arthritic Threat

At the first symptoms of sore throat, the first preventive measure is to take a special ointment of Dr. Thomas' Eclectic Oil. Add a little sugar to the oil and rub it over the sore throat to irritate and prevent the ulceration and swelling that are so often the result of the disease.

The attitude of taking oil as it comes is merely mental and therefor attainable.

Minister Of Labor Deplores Plan To Bring Jobless From Britain

Toronto. — Immigration problems formed the chief subject of discussion at a session of the Trade and Labor Congress of Canada. While there was no formal vote on the immigration policy left untouched, the highlights of the session were the unqualified denunciation of the British mine-harvester movement, and an address by Hon. Peter Heenan, in which the Minister of Labor dealt forcefully with the immigration question.

Mr. Heenan charged that there was a well-thought out campaign being conducted in Great Britain to stampede the people of Canada into bringing British unemployed to Canada by the shipload. The propaganda was motivated by the desire of certain interests in the old country to move the Canadian government and encourage persons in Canada to be willing to flood the labor market and provide ten men for every job.

As an instance of the working of the campaign, he said that advertisements in England were being made to the people that certain miners were wanted in Canada at high wages when as a matter of fact there was a surplus of miners in every country of the Dominion.

It's a lie," he declared. Mr. Heenan "to say that the British unemployed don't want to work and that they are content to subsist on the dole. They want to work and so the raise reports of lots of work and high wages in Canada are eagerly received."

"Canada ought to have something to say about this." He continued. "Canada ought to be part the stage when this is all over. A paper and pamphlet, I can assure you, that Britain has allowed a man convicted of a crime to go to Canada if he migrates to Canada."

The Labor minister defended the movement of British miners to Canada as being of British interest to the miners and as being of great benefit to Canada.

"We knew we could get men in Canada," he said, "but the British government offered us 25,000 men; accustomed to hard manual work and why should we turn down our own flesh and blood?"

Gambling In Land Values

Says Prices All Over Canada Are

London, Ont.—Gambling in land by all classes of Canadian citizens is one of the major reasons values are at such prices, declared A. G. Galli, of Toronto, speaking at noon before the annual meeting of the Town Planning Institute of Canada convention being held in the city.

The speaker quoted prices to show that land values were very much higher in Canada than in England, either colonial or otherwise, and he stated that the chief reason for this was wholesale speculation in properties all over the Dominion.

"We met several of the British families who were settled at various points in the Peace River district under the 5,000 acre scheme, and without exception, all these people are doing well, and more than satisfied with their venture."

Some of these men were miners, a few of them had any previous farming experience, but they are making good, and their experience shows clearly that given the will to succeed, lack of experience is no bar to success.

Lord Lovat found that over 3,000 homesteaders and settlers have gone into the Peace district this year, and everywhere there prevails a spirit of optimism for the future.

More Wreckage From Amundsen Plane Found

Part Of Wing Believed To Be From French Seaplane

Oslo, Norway.—What is believed to be additional wreckage from the plane in which Roald Amundsen and five companions were lost at sea in 1928 has been found in the Southern part of the Nobile Arctic expedition.

It seemed to be a part of a wing from the Amundsen seaplane, which was shot down by German gunners.

The wreckage was found by a British naval aviator.

The relic, which will be examined by French naval experts from the cruiser Saint-Louis, was found in the sea where one sailor, a man who had picked up one of the prions of the plane. Discovery of that portion convinced both Norwegian and French authorities that the British experts had finished identification of an additional relic of the missing plane which would be taken here as confirming that belief.

Los Angeles.—A tiny plane constructed on a new vertical principle, made success in the first attempt at demonstrating, observers said, that an aircraft can make an automatic landing.

Dr. E. Holley, who piloted the plane, was said to have taken the plane from the ground on 5½ seconds, soared sharply upward, cruised at 100 miles an hour and then landed with both hands shot.

Lord Lovat, chairman of the British Settlement committee, on his return to Edmonton following a week's tour in Canada's farmland country.

"We met several of the British families who were settled at various points in the Peace River district under the 5,000 acre scheme, and without exception, all these people are doing well, and more than satisfied with their venture."

Some of these men were miners, a few of them had any previous farming experience, but they are making good, and their experience shows clearly that given the will to succeed, lack of experience is no bar to success.

Lord Lovat found that over 3,000 homesteaders and settlers have gone into the Peace district this year, and everywhere there prevails a spirit of optimism for the future.

"THE LINKS OF LIFE"

If you can smile when, spite of personal shadow...
Your driver starts the ether with a thud...
The toe-ed up ball, winds at you all askance...
Smile then, and you're a golfer...
If you can keep your head when bresses blow...
Your lofted shots into the blank rough...
And pay your forfeit with a general grunt...
You may walk with Winsor and may know...
The joy of stepping out with those in front...
If you keep cool when bogy's al-most beat...
And your opponent hard upon your trail...
Get a you one up and then begin to cheat—
Your puts just stagger to the edge then fall;...
If you can keep your nerve then you do...
If some off-day you join the Footers...
And balls get lost and divots fly like hell...
While caddie holds his mouth to hide his sneers...
Your broken clubs break and every stick for sale;...
You're learning HIG, and how to play the game...
If spite of this you go on unper-
For life and golf are very much the same...
With hazards, bunkers, luring to the rough...
Keep in the fairway, eyes glued to the ball...
The virtue's in the playing, not the prizing...
Each thing that proves your mettle you improve;...
In life and golf, the winners, he who tries...

Always Room

At a public dinner a certain bishop was genially patronized by a millionnaire.

"I never go to church," the millionaire said. "Perhaps you've noticed that, bishop?"

"Yes, we have noticed it," said the bishop gravely.

"No doubt you wonder why I never go to church, don't you?" the millionaire pursued. "Well, I'll tell you why, bishop. You have no money, bishop. There's no money here."

"Oh, don't you tell that keep you away," cried the bishop, smiling. "There is always room for one more, you know."

A Round Square

An Irlamian got a job on some reconstruction work. The first day the foreman, wishing to play a joke on Pat, sent him out for a tool; facetiously called a "round square."

Pat returned in a short time with a dozen round tools.

"What's this?" said the foreman. "What's this?"

"This is the round," said the Irlamian, with a grin. "An' Oi told the landlord ye would square him on Saturday."

"Oh, don't you tell that keep you away," cried the bishop, smiling. "There is always room for one more, you know."

Only things to eat and drink and wear are high in price. Happiness is at the same old figure.

Prisoners Have Chance To Acquire Education

Men in Canadian Prisons Make Good Showing At Examinations

Fifty-eight prisoners at Canada's penitentiaries sat this year for high educational examinations, stated Gen. W. S. Hughes, superintendent of penitentiaries, who is visiting England in the course of his regular cross-Channel inspection of the various penal institutions under his control.

Of these 58 men, it is already known that out of eight who sat for matriculation at Kingston, six have passed with honours, and at Mount Mountain, three men were entered for first year university examinations. The full results are not yet known, but Gen. Hughes is sure that "his boys" have done well. He has done a belief in giving a man a chance, if he shows himself at all willing to mind his ways, and to get back once more to the path of the law-abiding.

HE DIDN'T THINK DYSENTERY COULD BE RELIEVED

Mr. John Melling, Fenner, Alta., who had been suffering from dysentery, I suffered greatly with dysentery. The doctor said it was chronic and did not expect to get well again. However, he doctored me for quite a while, but did me no good. One day the druggist asked me if I had ever tried

"On his recommendations I bought a bottle and after I had taken it got some relief, so I got two more, and never had the dysentery since 1900."

Historically speaking the Glasgow Town Hall is a comparatively recent building, but in its Venetian Gothic style, and the hall in which we were entertained is lofty, airy and in its shape grandly magnificient. There beautiful wall panels command attention, one depicting the legend of King Robert the Bruce. In the reproduction of which is still part of the City's coat of arms; a second one, we are told, of the Age of Faith. It is interesting to note that in this scene was portrayed a Clydesdale, although the period concerned is the 13th century. The battle of Lutcton on the stocks of the Clyde between her countrymen, the baronial party, and the English, the battle of which can boast a history. Queen Victoria, King Edward, Queen Alexandra, the Empress of Russia, and the Prince of Wales have dined in it. Every Prince of Wales has dined in it. Every 1588 has been a guest of the City there; and in July, 1914, three weeks before the war was declared, the English fleet, after visiting the shipping centres of England and Scotland, only two were here—The "Dreadnaught" and "The Kaiser." The German and the British Nations' Anthems were sung. Soon after the battle of Jutland, the British home fleet cut short by the outbreak of the Great War.

Sir David Maxwell and the Corporation entertained us in characteristic Scottish style. The haggis was piped into the room, and the Scotch whisky was served "a' the Gither" by the City of Glasgow Police Band, at the end of which cere- mony, the band marched off. The Pipe Major Gray the time-honored refreshment, acknowledged by the Pipe Major, was served. The Pipe Major said: "Thanks and a health to you!" spoken in Gaelic.

His secret history attaches to the fine new leathern skin which was worn by the Pipe Major for the first time and in our honor. It appeared from the pipe major that the Corporation to which the economy was not in doing so, had not cut out the pipe major's trumpet from the annual outfit of uniformed city officers. It was proposed to spend £1000 on a standard stand for the Pipe Major, but this would hardly have done in view of the incident of the "Dreadnaught" and "The Kaiser."

The difficulty was overcome by a public-spirited citizen who presented the pipe major with a leather skin.

There were two musical programs, Gaelic airs, marches, strathspeys and reels, and a solo by the City of Glasgow Police Orchestra who honored us by playing Canadian songs. The pipe major had been entertained at royal.

We spent an afternoon watching a youth's musical guests of the Corporation and learned to appreciate the experience.

The European part of our cultural program was now over, but there was one unscheduled event for which the party was responsible. We had been invited to a dinner at the Hotel Macdonald.

We had seen more in thirty days than perhaps any party of the same size had ever seen.

Some money was no key, had been thrown open to us. Privileges jealousy and the like were freely accorded to us.

There were two whatevver Province, they have from: and it was with sincere regret that we paid our respects at the hotel where we stayed behind.

At length we were off, the shores of Longfellow's lost in the evening night.

"Good-bye, old gal," Donald said, with his arms about the cold, shaggy neck. "The dog turned slowly and unwillingly toward the house. In the meantime, within the house, John and Leah and his wife were discussing the weather round the father's sewing, severally.

"Donald is at great trial to us now," John said, "but we must not forget the 'happiness' he has brought in the past." She gazed long and lovingly at a photograph of her son as a small boy, his hair brown, his lips moved in silent prayer.

Upon his arrival at the wharf Donald found his baggage, destroyed the door he had been in the habit of using as his father was out of the steamboat line, and bought a ticket to Bangor.

Reaching Bangor, he chose less expensive quarters than his cousin, the Exchange Stock. In no mood for sleep, he decided to take a stroll. Outside an all-night restaurant was a long string of cars, and from within came the sound of happy laughter.

A knock at the door, followed by a slight hunger induced him to enter. A big man sat at the counter, attacking vigorously a T-bone steak, was the centre of interest, as evidenced by the cluster of tasteless, uninterested, and somewhat bored about him. He wore a wide-brimmed hat; high leather boots, corduroy trousers, a blue flannel shirt, and a red necktie. A coat hanger stood behind him. Blood flushed half up from his head aggressively, and his steely blue eyes were set in a fance stamped a brick red.

"Yes, sir," spoke the blond girl seated at the counter. "We're a country side. None of our customers show that I used to git here in these Eastern loggin' camps, so belly and beans three times a day, and work for' ten full dollars' a month from daylong to daylong." "No, sirre," said the Canadian, "I'll be in the Canadian side to-morrow." And talk about grub! Say, there ain't any hotel that puts up better scoufins than you can't get in the loggin' camps in good old B.C."

"I know, I know," his mate said, and convinced that they were interested, he continued: "You sir, British Columbia for me, say? What'd you think of three loggers that made a thousand dollars' a month, and then had to leave the cedar trees feet bared? To add to that, you can't get your arms round? Some diff'rent, than these toothpicks you got round them," jerking his thumb contemptuously toward the Penobscot River.

"Auntie," he went on, "the mountaineers is a hillbilly bunch, and inlets that never's been prospected. Prospectors comin' in every day with new strikes. And talk about fish! I seen the fish so thick they combed the rivers with combs, and the men with up their backs." He finished his repeat with a gulp of coffee, fished a sack of tobacco and drew a paper from his pocket, and rolled a cigarette. "I'll be in the Canadian side to-mornin', on his eyes shining with enthusiasm, "that ain't half exploded yet, and richer 'n a pail of cream. How much do I owe you, boy?"

Donald told of being in the hundreds when he had displayed his bill from the outside money, and of the waiter's subsequent remarks.

"Huh!" said the big man dryly, "guess I need a guardhouse."

With the assistance of the obliging night-clerk, who furnished the counter and court plaster, they patched the hurls of the much-bruised Westerner.

When the clerks left the room the big man turned to Donald. "My name's Jack Gillis. What's yours?"

"Donald McLean."

"Darn good name," he agreed, "but I've never seen it written centrally."

"I've visited my old home in Nova Scotia," he ran on. "Come down here to visit my sister. I'm gittin' house-sick for the Pacific Slope, and I'm goin' to hit for B.C. tomorrow and Donald."

The effect of this statement on Gillis was electric. "What do you belong in B.C.?" he demanded excitedly.

Gillis had given him a brief description of that land of promise that had induced him to go West, and that was to be his first visit to the Coast.

"I'm on my way to Vancouver," said Donald.

"That's a real compliment," smiled Gillis.

"I'm goin' on the mornin' train," remarked Gillis. "I'll be back to have you travel with me."

Donald nodded.

REDCLIFF EDITOR HAS TOUGH LUCK

The editor is clipped from the Redcliff Review.

"Several of our out-of-town subscribers have written us asking why they have not been getting The Review regularly lately. It made us think of the old saying, 'You never miss the lager till the keg runs dry.'"

"Well, in answer to these inquiries, we might explain that the editor had the misfortune to break his leg. Owing to the falling off of local advertising lately we could not afford to hire help to get The Review out as usual, so the editor had to discontinue publication till the editor was able to get around again. Unfortunately, however, when he was able to get down to the office with the help of sticks, he contracted the flu, and was under the care of the doctor for several weeks. This week we are on the go again, and since we feel that Job has been up to us, we hope to be able to continue getting the paper out regularly every week."
